Glue Factory Announces New Team Rider

Minneapolis, Minn., June 15, 2009 – Glue Factory Skateboard's headquarters announced today that it has welcomed Chad Benson to the team.

Mr. Benson had been submitting sponsor-me tapes to Glue Factory team manager Ian Steig for a few months in an effort to "blow up" for a record fourth time. He recently underwent surgery to repair a torn ligament in his push foot. After a few sessions skating with local high schoolers and a part in the Familia video, Benson showed team management he was still able to skate at a competitive level and was offered him a spot on the team, with the stipulation he participated in all team workouts and demos.

"We are very pleased to have Mr. Benson on board and feel he has several good months of skating left in him," said Glue Factory team manager Ian Steig. "Chad Benson? They left the nursing home doors open again!" added excited platinumseagulls.com message board lurker "educatedguess."

And since we're talking, the fundraiser boards for Ryan Hansen's dad are almost gone. Familia and Cal Surf have the last few boards, so go pick them up ($40, size 7.8"). Thanks to FL Project who sold out of their boards, and special thanks to 3rd Lair for going above and beyond by selling several extra boards for the cause.

Glue Factory Skateboards is owned and operated by one skater and is not traded publicly on NASDAQ or NYSE. Aside from Mr. Benson, the team consists of Ryan Hansen, Dan Jackson, Danny Jansen, Neal Erickson, Mike Munzenrider, and Jamiel Nowparvar.
