Glue Factory Video Delayed

Minneapolis, Minn., November 18, 2008 – Glue Factory Skateboard's headquarters announced today that it's first video, tentatively titled "filler," will be moved back to a winter 2009 premier.

An unfortunate number of setbacks are chiefly responsible for the delay, including: problems obtaining pyrotechnics permits, snafu's accessing rights to the Beatle's catalog, OSHA putting a temporary cease-construction on our mega-ramp, a moody animal trainer walking off the project, and one rider not filming a damn thing. Some or all of the preceding sentence may or may not be true, but really, we want to put out the best video we can, so pushing it back gives us a better chance to put out something halfway decent since the Boondoggle fucker's are making it so hard on us old dudes.

"We hope our audience understands and would also prefer to see a more complete effort from the Glue Factory team," said Glue Factory team manager Ian Steig. "Also, we felt we needed to announce this as quickly as possible in order to quell the e-assault that will undoubtedly ensue from the legions of anonymous commenters on platinumseagulls.com."

Glue Factory Skateboards is owned and operated by one skater and is not traded publicly on NASDAQ or NYSE. The team consists of Ryan Hansen, Dan Jackson, Danny Jansen, Mike Munzenrider, and Neal Erickson.
